Fumes Explode, Hurt 26 People Watching Fire

YORK, Pa. (P)-At least 26 persons watching a fire last night were injured when gas fumes seeping through the area were set ablaze and exploded.

Fire engine driver Edward Horn said, "The explosion in the middle of the crowd sounded like a big 'puff' and suddenly you could see people laying on the ground and others moving around with their clothes on fire.

Others in the crowd rolled those with flaming clothes on the ground to extinguish the flames. "It was remarkable, but there was no panic," said Horn.

York Hospital said it had treated 26 persons for burns or for the effects of inhaling gas. Eleven were held overnight in the hospital and all were reported in satisfactory condition.

The original fire began as two men attempted to remove bottled gas tanks from beside a building housing the Delthia Athletic Assn Gas seeping from a tank exploded, injuring one of the men. The building was not damaged.

How Do You Plan

Your Kitchen Work? The kitchen is the homemaker's workshop — many different kinds of jobs are done there. Some are easy, some are difficult, some dull and some pleasant. But with nearly any task we do in the kitchen, it is possible to spend a little time and thought to improve how we do them. Study these suggestions for improving ways. Look at how you usually do it. Ask yourself some questions. Then make needed changes. You will probably find it easier to have some one help you to look at how you usually do a job. Another member of the family might watch you and keep track of the mo-tions you make, the steps you take, and the time you use. You'll likely want to start with fairly simple jobs and ones that you do often. Making a sandwich might be a good start. Of course, you'll need to get things together. You might go back and forth from mix center to refrigerator, to cabinet, to knife drawer and to bread box with a stop each time at the mix center. Then when all is collected, you make the sandwich—you trim the lettuce, put the bread down, spread the bread and complete the sandwich. Then you put what is left back in place and clean up your work

Tuna Output On Increase, Prices Drop

SAN DIEGO (2) - The tuna industry isn't hurting as badly this summer as last and that should be good news for salad and sandwhich devotees.

Prices are lower-both on what the fishermen catch and what the canner sells—but production is higher, consumption in the United States continues to rise, and for the first time in five years there hasn't been a big annual jump in the amount of canned and frozen fish the Japanese sell in this mar-

New money is coming into the industry too-much of it, surprisingly enough from land-locked Kansas City-to finance the building of new clippers.

Also, the canners haven't, as yet anyway, much felt the potential competition from the fairly new canneries in Puerto Rico, along the U.S. Gulf Coast, and as far away as Pago Pago in American Samoa.

This doesn't mean that the fishermen and the canners are real happy. They aren't.

They deeply resent the Japanese inroads. If it isn't higher this year than last, it isn't lower either. James B. Lane, president of Westgate - California Tuna Packing, feels the leveling off of imports is due more to bad fishing luck than to any change of heart by

It's only Julyso why miss the fun?

(It's a great time to buy a Buick!)

N ALL TRUTH - when would be a L better time to buy your new Buick than right now?

When else could you drive home a better bargain-with your present car now worth more than it ever will be again - and while Buick prices are within easier reach of more people than ever before?

And when else would you get more good out of it all? When else will there be better weather - more hours in the day-more yen for going-more places to go-more fun on tap-more sports in season?

So you get the most good, and the most car right now in a new Buick . . .

Because the new Buick you boss today is far and away the best Buick yet ...

Because simply seeing this Buick beauty standing before your door is enough to spark your spirits ...

Because eager as a colt in clover, it can barely wait for key and throttle to turn loose the boundless power of its big 322-cubic-inch V8 engine that revels in running ...

Because it spices every moving moment with sweet-riding joy that makes even the simplest errand an enjoyable excursion ...

And because you relax in the wide open spaces of its rich interior-while Variable Pitch Dynaflow* performs its pace-making magic with a smoothness matched nowhere else on wheels.

So why waste time keeping a car that becomes more humdrum and less valuable every day?

Come let the Buick you could be driving show you what wonderful sense it makes to buy in July.

Come now-the model that matches your ideas and dollars may be ready for delivery this very week-and at a whale of a deal too good to pass up.

*New Advanced Variable Pitch Dynaflow is the only Dynaflow Buick builds today. It is standard on Roadmaster, Super and Century—optional at modest extra cost on the Special.

To her come all requests for sustaining time and all scripts for political, cultural and educational talks heard over CBS radio and CBS-TV. As a remote sideline to all her other activities, she has gained quite a big reputation as "spiker of rumors" since she attended her first national political convention for CBS in 1936. She will, of course, be present and accounted for at the conventions next month with a sharp spike for all and any rumors.

How do you spike a political rumor anyway? Well it helps to know a current or former president of the United States-and Miss Sioussat has known all presidents and their families from Herbert Hoover on.

In 1952 the rumor was rife at the Republican National Convention that Gen. Douglas MacArthur was flying to Chicago. "Try to check it for us, Helen," said the CBS news chief.

"I phoned Mr. Hoover at the Waldorf in New York," Miss Sioussat recalled the other day. "He told me that Gen. MacArthur was not flying to Chicago and that I could deny the rumor. He didn't ask me not to mention his name. He knew he didn't need to. As a matter of fact, this is the first time I've told the story. But the rumor was spiked and CBS recalled its newsmen from the airport at Chicago."

NEW TRAINER MARKS TWO "FIRSTS"-Navy's TT-1, slated for delivery in July of 1957, will be her first primary jet trainer Similar to her fighting sisters of the Fleet's air arm in equipment and characteristics, her biggest difference will be one of speed. Maximum speed for the two-seater is in the neighborhood of 300 knots and a low landing speed of 62 knots makes her a craft fit for students who are not ready for "hot," supersonic ships. Second "first" for the craft is that she's a new entrant in America's plane building field. The evaluation order for a quantity of TT-1s is the first military production order for a complete aircraft of its own design for Tempco Aircraft, Dallas, Tex., subcontractors for aircraft assemblies.

Bing Cherries Encourage Cooks

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

"Extra large, heart shaped, deep aroon to black in color; flesh firm, meaty, of luscious flavor; skin smooth and glossy; good shipper and keeper.

That's a fruit expert's definition of Bing cherries. It encourages a cook to conjure up delicious ways to serve the fruit.

Want a showy food piece for a company lunch or supper? Then fix a salad-dessert with the cherries plus melon, oranges and pineapple. Accompany the fruit with nutted cream - cheese tidbits and fancied-up mayonnaise. What else to serve on the menu?

As a starter you might have icecold Vichysoisse with minced chives. But if come of your guests are weight-watchers it would be well to have jellied Madrilene as well. A main course of fried chicken is always popular. With the chicken, mashed potatoes will taste good especially if they are sprinkled with grated cheddar cheese and then peel. Peel oranges so no white membrane remains; slice into rounds or cut membrane-free sections. Drain pineapple and reserve syrup. With a sharp knife dipped into hot water, cut firm cold cream cheese into 9 pieces; roll each piece in finely chopped pecans. Arrange all the fruit wreath-fashion on a large chop plate. Add the nutted cream-cheese tidbits. Stir 1/4 cup of the reserved pineapple syrup into the mayonnaise and add Bahama-type mustard to taste. Start by adding 2 teaspoons of the mustard and then increase the amount if you like. Turn mayonnaise into a small bowl; place bowl in center of the chop plate holding the fruit wreath. Makes 6 servings.

Note: Have all fruit well chilled before preparing salad. Any may-onnaise left over may be stored in a covered jar in the refrigerator.

JUST A BOWL OF CHERRIES

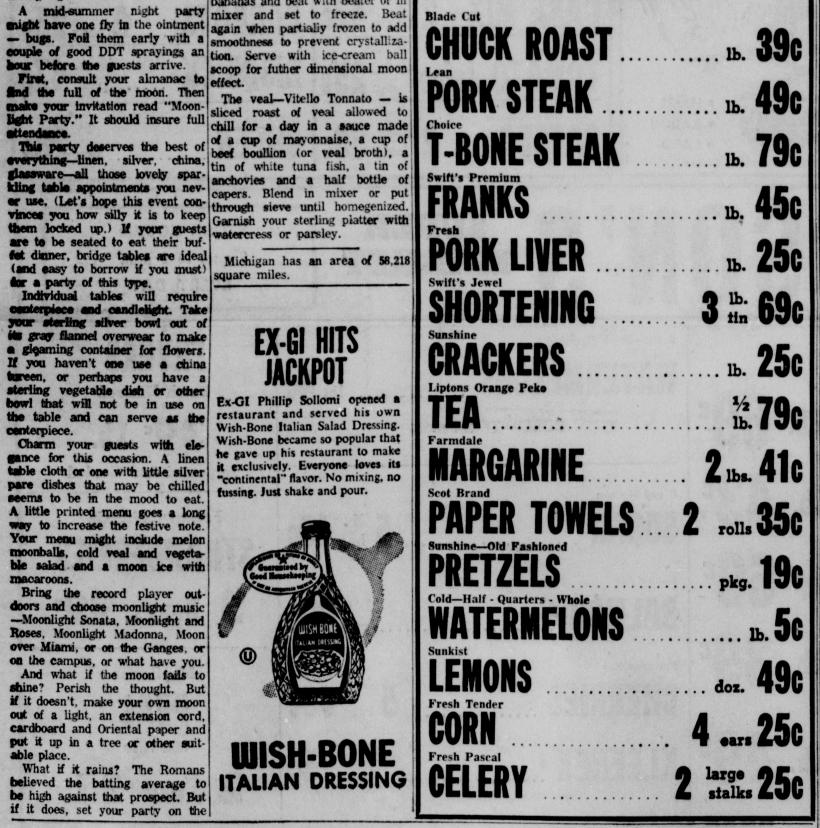

It's fun to serve Bing cherries for dessert in a crystal-clear bowl partly filled with cold water and ice cubes. We sometimes offer cherries this way and our guests are usually intrigued because the fruit tastes so delightfully fresh when it is lifted out of its chilly bath. If you try this, be sure to leave the stems on the cherries so that those at the top of the bowl may be lifted out easily. We use (13½ ounces) pineapple chunks, 1 has been eaten and the cherries in package (3 ounces) cream cheese, the bottom of the bowl really float. STORING CHERRIES

PHILADELPHIA BULLETIN: Picking a State

Really, Pennsylvania needs an official state vania than an olive tree.

The real Pennsylvania dog is a good, oldshiened hard-working hound, maybe of some viduals rebel against communism. I suggested that it was much better to have groups of cause East Germons distrusted governments. They did not distrust people. "Will you write me a letter about this?" re-

Americans operate than the government, be-quested Secretary Benson. "I have already written one," I said, and pulled it out of my pocket.

Days passed-a total of three weeks. No word from Benson. Finally, Riddleberger phoned to say that he had taken $15,000,000 out of the State Department budget to offer food to the East Berliners.

The State Department drafted an official announcement and President Eisenhower signed it. It was a fine gesture, and good politics here at home. But part of the bloom was off the rose. By that time it was July. The riots were over. And the official announcement by the U.S. government was interpreted abroad as a pure propaganda gesture. It won us no friends. Balloons to Poland

This unwritten history is told now for one reason only-the recent revolt in Poznan,

This time the State Department, acting more wisely, had the American Red Cross offer to send food to the Poles. The Red Cross, though organized under the wing of the U.S. governturned down.

However, it is still not too late for groups of patriotic Americans to offer food to the Poles. If the offer is turned down, it is still not too late to send the food in small packages by balloon. The Crusade for Freedom has been sending balloon messages into Poland ever since we inaugurated the idea from West Berlin in the summer of 1951.

At first we were not as successful in reaching Poland as Czechoslovakia. But balloon techniques have improved since then, and it would be perfectly possible to launch a tremendous barrage of balloons carrying waterproofed packaged food, each bearing a message in the Polish language to the people of Poland from individual Americans in the U.S.A.

One reason Congress is cutting down on foreign aid is because aid by government has lost part of its effectiveness. But the American people have great generosity, great initiative, and great enthusiasm, once they are given a chance to move.

Worthwhile Document

Few nonfiction books of recent times are likely to stir as much interest or controversy as Robert Donovan's "Eisenhower: The Inside Story." Its appearance raises some questions we all ought to look at.

For one thing, there is the matter of the administration's making available to Donovan. a New York Herald Tribune reporter, intimate proceedings of the executive branch of a character heretofore always withheld from both Congress and the courts.

Naturally enough, Congress is annoyed. Thus far senators have failed to get any administration spokesman to appear before them to discuss the issue. The Eisenhower people are saying nothing in public at all, but general report has it that Sherman Adams, top presidential assistant, made the material available.

No doubt Congress will recall the Donovan book whenever in the future it demands documents or other information from the White House. No doubt, too, the refusal to give this material will be just as firm as in the past.

To some this might seem both unfair and unreasonable. But there is nevertheless broad acceptance for the idea that any administration is priviledged to judge for itself what information shall be disclosed, and to whom.

We have to understand that it isn't the complete "inside story." It is founded mainly on minutes of Mr. Eisenhower's cabinet meetings. Proceedings of the top-level National Security Council, where most of the big decisions affecting peace and defense are taken, are not involved. Vital staff discussions in the nature of things are also not drawn upon.

Nevertheless, there is much fascinating material in his book, and not all of it complimentary to the administration, by a long shot. Evidence of this is the Democratic declaration that it will be used by the party's candidates in the coming campaign.

growling about continuing American aid to neutrals. India is the world's biggest neutral. If this country can't win India as an ally, the last thing it wants is India as a Russian ally.

He didn't stop the on to suggest that if a nation joins a military alliance and is then attacked, other countries may say it got what was coming to it. This was startling. This country had spent time and money trying to win military allies.

It wasn't hard to imagine the effect on those Asian countries which had allied themselves with the United States while India remained aloof. It wasn't long before the White House put out a statement explaining that what Eisenhower meant to say was that some nations are justified in being neutral but they'd be safer as American allies. Vice President Nixon defended a nation's right to be neutral in a speech the next night, June 7. He said "we must deal" with neutrals "as moral and spiritual equals."

Dulles said just the opposite in a June 9 speech, thus compounding the confusion begun by Eisenhower. Dulles said neutrality is "immoral and shortsighted."

This raised a question-just

There is no reason to believe that lack of fertility is involved in the couple in question. However. there are a great many couples who would like to have children and do not succeed in having them. The old idea that the woman was always at fault in an infertile union is, of course, no longer accepted. It is believed that about half of all sterile marriages are attributable to the husband. Inability to conceive may be the result of some structural or functional defect either in the husband or the wife. It may be possible to identify and correct such defect or it may not.

Some problems of infertility are the result of lowered general health of one partner or both - and perhaps emotional or psychological factors.

When inability to conceive is encountered, the proper procedure is for both husband and wife to be carefully examined, both for specific reasons for the infertility and for general health factors.

Politics of Woodrow Wilson: Idealist, Moralistic Reformer

By JOSEPH A. DEAR

Of Our Washington Bureau WASHINGTON - Woodrow Wilson went out of fashion during that dreadful era when the waistline and hemline of the tubular dress threatened to merge, and for a long time it would have been easier to revive its popularity than his.

But there has been a Wilson revival. It was marked this year by the publication of "The Politics of Woodrow Wilson" (Harper), selections from his speeches and writings by August Heckscher. This is a welcome volume. The word politics is used in its broadest sense by Mr. Heckscher. He offers samplings from each phase of Wilson's career: He was first the student and critic of the governmental process. Then the educator. Then the Governor. And He was at all times an idealist and moralistic reformer. His life illustrates the heights to which dedicated intelligence can lead, and the frustration which is sometimes the consequence of ideal-

It is quite likely that Wilson will prompt conflicting thoughts reader. Some of the selections from Congressional Government, his first book, might have been written today. One nods and says, yes this is so, but the conditioning factor is knowledge that the government has worked without his reforms

His famous description, "no leaders, no principles; no principles, no parties," has a certain abstract validity which is independent of the invidious connotation. "Congressional leadership," Wilson wrote, "is divided infinitesimally; and with divided leadership there can be no great party units." It was a favorite argument of his that Congressional irresponsibility was inevitable so long as the members were loyal only to narrow local interests. Such narrowness assured stultifying debate which would ignore the national interest

The Presidency, he argued, was as big an office as the President would make it. (The) "office is anything he has the sagacity and force to make." That has been demonstrated.

No one ever explained better than Wilson the reason for the occasional appearance of men such as General Eisenhower, who enter politics as an amateur.

. . The country will demand of he be a man such as it can trust, character, in intention, in tion of the best means by which those needs can be met, in capacity to prevail by reason of his own weight and integrity. Sometimes the country believes in party, but more often it believes in a man . .

Wilson is very quotable, even though his writings are stiff fare. The following passages are especially revealing. The first is from his baccalaureate address at Princeton in 1908. ... I am not suggesting to you a mere philosophy of happiness. My point is not that if you are not righteous you will not be happy, though that is true enough. The point lies deeper than that. am not sure that it is of the first importance that you should be happy. Many an unhappy man has been of deep service to the world and to himself, has guided his fellow men and exhalted his own life. .

The second passage comes from a short address Wilson delivered at his Grandfather's church. Carlisle, England, December, 1918, during his great days of triumph.

. . I believe that as this war has drawn the nations temporarily together in a combination of physical force we shall now be drawn together in a combination of moral force that will be irresistible. It is moral force that is irresistible. It is moral force as much as physical force that has defeated the effort to subdue the world. Words have cut as deep as the sword. The knowledge that wrong was being attempted has aroused the nations . . . It is from quiet places like this all over the world that the forces accumulate which presently will overbear any attempt to accomplish evil on a large scale. Like the rivulets gathering into the river and the river into the seas, there come from the communities like this streams that fertilize the consciences of men, and it is the conscience of the world that we are trying to place upon the throne which others would usurp.

There is a freshness and vitality about Wilson's writings that will protect them from time. These qualities stand out when his works are contrasted with political commentaries of today. Those of John Mason Brown, the drama critic, are a case in point. In "Through These Men" (Harper). Mr. Brown attempts to give a picture of our times in terms of outstanding men who are acin the mind of the contemporary tive in our society. The effort is not entirely successful. His opening article on the Democratic and Republican nominat> ing conventions of 1952 makes them seem deadly dull .And the leading participants-Ike, Stevenson, and HST-hardly emerge as personalities. Among the best sections of the book are those devoted to J. Rob-

Thinking It Over

By Robert L. Dieffenbacher, D.D. Service in America is rendered by everyone. We have come to realize that our successes and satisfactions in living are determined by the service which we give to other people. Public officials are known as public servants. Waiters and bellboys and stockholders are proud to serve their fellow men. All of us recognize a certain responsibility to others. We do not frown on those who add to the comforts of other people. In fact, we are inclined to be critical of any who do not strive to benefit their neighbors. We think of such folk as selfish, unscrupulous and unAmerican

There is one serious problem, however, in this area of service which deserves consideration. We are inclined to serve as a matter of habit, rather than because of high ideals. Some have learned to serve because it pays to give service. Some do for and unto others because they wish to be on the bandwagon of the majority.

It is time we appraised our actions and the relationship of our living to our ideals. Jesus washed the feet of the Disciples with no thought of reward. He did it as an example of service. He lived His whole life for other people. He broke down the barrier which existed between authority and servitude. He established brotherhood and love as basic tenets for His way of life.

first become a servant of others, and that service must be based on brotherly love. We must consciously apply our spiritual ideals to our daily living.

It's a slogan that could only be used by one sure of his product, but Monroe Veach should know saddles.

As a youth on the huge "Flying Horseshoe" ranch in Colorado, he learned to rope, ride and perform the work of a cowboy. After serv ng in World War I, he returned to roping . . . in rodeos this time...and was so successful, he placed in the money throughout the West.

But his return to roping and riding also brought the return of his long time ambition to make saddles which fully met the requirements of rodeo champions. For the next eight years he toured the rodeo circuit gathering first hand information on the kind of saddles needed by his fellow riders.

Testifying to his success in meeting these requirements is his most famous saddle, "The Fred Lowry Roper." It was used by 18 of the 21 steer ropers in recent contests at Cheyenne, Wyoming. The saddle was designed by Fred Lowry, six time winner of the Cheyenne Rodeo World's Champion Steer roping contests.

Today, Monroe Veach devotes his time to his saddlery plant. That is, until he gets word of a roping contest nearby. Then, once more, it's "off to the rodeo" with his palomino horse, Goldie.

Missouri Public Service is proud to supply electricity to the modern Veach Saddlery plant, a business which began with a small gas engine as power supply.
